

JKUAT university student cycles over 500 km to encourage use of bicycles in Kenyan cities and towns

A Third year student at the Jomo Kenyatta University of Agriculture and Technology (JKUAT) is determined to encourage Kenyans to adopt cycling. Shin Juma cycled over 500km across different counties in five days in an effort to inspire Nairobians and those in other towns to use bicycles more often in order to save time. "My main aim is to inspire Nairobians and Kenyans living and working in towns to use bicycles more often in order to save time, reduce congestion and embrace cycling as a sport," said Juma.
